

MONTH'S TRIAL FREE.

Breaths Hyomei Three or Four Times Daily and Be Cured of Catarrh.

The Noyes Drug Store, one of the most reliable business firms in Norway, have seen many instances of the remarkable power of Hyomei to cure catarrhal troubles and other disorders of the respiratory organs. Results in this treatment have given them so much confidence in Hyomei that they will give a month's trial with the positive understanding that if at the end of that time a cure is not effected or enough relief gained to warrant a continued use of the treatment for a while longer, the money will be refunded.

Hyomei is the only treatment for catarrh that has ever been sold under a "no cure, no pay" plan, and the only one where a month's trial treatment is free unless it cures.

Hyomei is not a pill or liquid. Just breathe it through the neat inhaler that comes with every outfit, and benefit will be seen from the first day's use. Breathe in this way, the health-giving Hyomei penetrates to the minutest air cells of the lungs, and drives catarrhal germs and poisons from the system.

The complete outfit costs but $1, and extra bottles of Hyomei may be obtained for 50c.

Remember that if Hyomei does not cure you after a month's trial, the Noyes Drug Store will refund your money and the treatment will be absolutely free.

The Mother's Column.

Do Mothers Favor Their Sons?

It is said that "the onlooker sees most of the game;" therefore the woman who is not married or the wife who has no children is best able to note the peculiar tendencies of the life and mother.

And from this standpoint of an outsider the truth is forced home to every observant outsider that mothers in general are very much more partial to their sons than to their daughters. And yet in nine cases out of ten—when confronted with the accusation that they are making fish and fash—so to speak—of their own children, they will blantly deny it.

Women are subtle creatures, and would sometimes even hide from themselves. If they could, their own wrongdoings.

And yet there is the occasional mother who is willing to admit that she is fonder of her sons than her daughters. As a woman said to me, "Why, it is perfectly natural for a mother to be fonder of her sons than her daughters. Every mother is; and I know that I was always fonder of mine."

"Well," I said, "then it is a blessed thing that your little daughter died, for she would have felt your neglect and it would have saddened and embittered her life."

"Perhaps it was unkind of me to say this, as she buried her only daughter when she was three years old, while her two sons are living. And yet it was hardly unkind on my part, either, for while she had but one daughter, and although she, the baby, was laid away in her grave, she could still admit that she was always fonder of her boys."

Mothers Should Spank More and Weep Less.

Sometimes I amuse myself by speculating on what state of affairs would be if mothers were kept over their wayward children, and spanked more. Every woman speaks of her children's conduct, when they turn out badly, as a mysterious dispensation of Providence. It's a sneaking way to try to get out of responsibility. She has been too weak, or too selfish, or too long to raise them right. Then the day comes when she discovers that her daughter is neglecting fast young men on the street, or some night her boy comes home staggering drunk and she can do nothing but cry over them. It is one of the great tragedies of life when a mother sees the young lives that are dearer to her than her own, and the young souls that she would give her own to save, hang trembling in the balance and she can meet the situation with nothing but tears.

Tears Useless as a Reforming Agent.

It has also always appeared to me that women have wasted quite an unnecessary amount of tears on their husbands. For a thousand generations wives have clung to the theory that a man could be wept into all the virtues of the cherub and seraphim. When a woman had a drunken husband, she got up and opened the door for him in the early hours of the morning and bedewed him with tears. When she had a brutal one, she wept when he mistreated her, but she forgot him and let him go on doing it. If their husbands were unfaithful to her, they shed a few barrels of tears and let it go at that. Now tears as a reforming agent are not worth a pinch of the salt that is in them. They don't work, and men never make the mistake of using them. Men never weep over women's misdeeds. They make their wives behave themselves, or else they haul them up before the divorce court, and that's why the percentage of good conduct is so largely in favor of the fair sex.

BETHEL.

A Musical Success.
 The grand concert at Odeon Hall last Tuesday evening under the direction of Prof. Scott Wright was a grand success in the stage effect, being a rare treat for all music-lovers present. The attendance was not large, but the enthusiasm extended in way of scores showed the appreciation of the hearers, and it continued in nearly every instance until the artists made a second appearance. Rev. Stanford Mitchell was recalled each time. On one occasion he came to the stage and bowed a recognition to the call of the audience, thinking it would be sufficient, but not so, he had to come forward "just once more." The Schubert Club of South Paris well sustained its former good reputation. The audience was also much pleased with and proud of their own Bethel talent in the male and female quartet.

J. M. Philbrook sent a car of fat cattle to market Monday.
 A large doe was seen recently on the north side of the river.

 "Patriots Day," last Tuesday, was much recognized by our citizens in the display of the stars and stripes on their houses and places of business.
 Oxford Association of Universalists was a full and interesting gathering on Wednesday morning. It continued Tuesday, and evening, Wednesday and this Thursday.
 All fruits and berries generally are looking finely, also grass fields. The agriculturist's greatest trouble this spring is in the failure of many seeds to germinate, especially those of the vining family.
 Mrs. Ellen (Douglass) Peaslee, wife of Silas Peaslee, of Upton, passed away Tuesday evening at her mother's home on High street, Bethel. She leaves an infant but a few days old. Much sympathy is expressed, as the parties have the profound respect of a wide circle of friends.

There was a runaway here, last week Thursday, that caused some excitement. As Lee Adams was driving down hill with a span of horses and cart, the pole became unfastened and dropped to the ground, letting the cart against the horses, which caused them to run. After wandering around and climbing fences until nearly dark he came out at Dell Willey's, but like any man lost did not know where he was. KNOWS MI-O-NA WILL CURE.

The Noyes Drug Store have Such Faith in This Great Dyspepsia Remedy That They Guarantee It.

It is an unusual thing for a druggist to sell a medicine under a guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.
Yet this is the way that Frank Kimball, the popular druggist, is selling MI-O-NA, the standard dyspepsia remedy.

Never before had he had so large a number of customers tell him that a medicine had cured with MI-O-NA.
People who a few months ago looked like walking skeletons have put on flesh and today are ruddy and vigorous, with perfect digestion and good health, solely due to the use of this remedy.

There is no longer any need of anyone suffering or making their friends suffer on account of dyspepsia, for MI-O-NA can be relied upon to cure. The percentage of cures is so nearly one hundred percent. that there is little risk to the Noyes Drug Store in guaranteeing to return the money if the medicine does not cure, and they stand ready to do so without any questions.

Headaches, all forms of indigestion, specks before the eyes, dizzy feelings, poor sleep, ringing in the ears and all forms of liver trouble are cured by MI-O-NA price 50c. A few days' treatment shows considerable gain in health and a cure speedily follows.

These days are the best in the whole year for the enjoyment of good health.
And MI-O-NA will put you in such perfect condition that you can enjoy every minute of them.

Written for the Advertiser.
From Earth to Heaven.

Oh, death, where is thy sting? Oh, grave, In the west there is thy victory?

With a radiance glorious, bright, Like a halo it filled the sick room.
With its strange and heavenly light.

And it seemed it came from heaven,
As the angels opened the door To come to earth to take our darling Back with them forevermore.

All her tasks on earth were finished, Each loving message had been sent,
Classed in her hands were resting, On her face was sweet content.

Friends and loved ones stood about her,
She had bade farewell to all,
Now she's waiting, sweetly waiting,
For her Savior's welcome call.

With tear-dimmed eyes we watched her breathing,
As it fluttered to and fro, Dreading yet with the dear one longing For the Savior's call to go.

And we thought it almost over,
That every breath would be the last,
When once more she spoke to us,
As if some favor she would ask.

And her mother bending o'er her, Quick to discern her need, Softly questioned, "Tell me, darling, Is it singing that you want?"

It is, just press more closely With your fingers on my arm, Quickly were the fingers lightened, Though from her lips there came no sound.

Scarcely had the hymn been started,
"My heavenly home is bright and fair,"
"You clear and distinct there rose the voice Of the dear one lying there."

As if from heaven new strength was lent her,
That we might hear her voice once more,
"I'm going home, I'm going home," Triumphantly she sang it o'er.

"Jesus, lover of my soul," Her voice still mingled with our own,
And we could but think how soon That voice would sing around the Throne.

"O, receive my soul at last," Trustingly she sang it o'er, But as we started "Rock of Ages," Her voice grew fainter, weaker, lower.

And we stopped, but still she murmured, Reverently our lips we bended, To catch each word of "Our Father," As she said it in her head.

Still more faintly came the voice, Floating on the evening air,
And we strained our ears to listen To her childhood's evening prayer.

"Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake, I pray thee, Lord, soul to take."

"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures, He leadeth me beside the still waters," What need of more? For surely There was no doubt but Jesus led.

With dimmed eyes she saw her father Standing there so bent and sad, And she whispered, "All is well, papa, it's all right."

And her voice was, Oh, so glad,
All was quiet for a moment,
And we knew she was passing o'er,
"I hear music, I see dowers, beautiful dowers," Came faintly back from the other shore.

Not less glorious than the sunlight That so lately filled the place, Was the smile that lingered sweetly On that still beloved face.

O, well miss you, miss you, darling, But we'll meet you over there, Where there's no death or pain or parting,
In that home so bright and fair.

South Paris, Me. L. E. B.

The Battle of Pequawket.
"Capt John Lovewell was an able partisan officer of the colonies. In April, 1725, he led 40 men from the Massachusetts frontier towns by a long and arduous march into the heart of the Pequawet country. He had 34 men left when he reached Saco (now Lovewell's) Pond, and here he encamped for 36 hours, near the chief village of the enemy.

"On Saturday, May 8, while the rangers were assembled around the chaplain on the beach, and ere the morning devotions had been finished, a gun was heard, and an Indian was seen watching them.
They left their packs near the pond, and advanced towards the intervals, but before they had reached the forest, who shot and mortally wounded Lovewell, though his own death followed instantly.

"Meantime the Sachem Paugus and 50 warriors had found and counted the packs and laid an ambush near them, which completely entrapped the Americans on their return. The magnanimous Paugus ordered his men to fire over the heads of the invaders, and then to bind them with ropes. With horrid yells the Indians leaped forth and asked Lovewell if he would have quarter. 'Only at the muzzles of your guns!' shouted the brave captain, and led his men against the enemy.

"They drove the Indians some rods, but were repulsed by a fierce counter-charge, in which Lovewell and eight of his men were killed. Then the Americans retreated slowly, fighting inch by inch, to a position with the pond on their rear, Battle Ground on the right, and Rocky Point on the left. This sheltered position they maintained for eight hours, against continual assaults and at sundown the Indians withdrew under the command of Wahwa, leaving 30 killed and wounded, including Paugus, who fell late in the contest. Throughout the long day the yells of the Indians, the cheers of the Americans, and the pattering of musketry resounded through the forest, while Chaplain Frye, mortally wounded when fighting among the foremost, was often heard praying for victory.

"In the moonlit midnight hour the rangers departed, leaving fifteen of their number dead and dying on the field, while nine of the eighteen others were wounded. After suffering terribly on the march, most of the little band reached the settlements. Several ballads commemorate this forest fight."

Fryeburg-on-the-Saco.
The village stands on a wide plain, and around it rise the mountains, one of the fairest spots in old New England. A pen picture gives but a faint idea of the loveliness with which the town is decked in summer time as it rests among the White Hills, girt round by a wide green sea of intervale with arching elms by wooded slopes and rocky crests, from which the breezes come that whisper to the feathery pine."

"This region was the home of the Pequawkets, and here on the high bank near the 'great bend' of the river stood the Indian village where Darby Field, the first white explorer, landed, seeking native guides for his journey to the Crystal Hills."

The township was granted to Gen.
Joseph Frye of Andover, Mass., for services in the French war. He with others from Massachusetts and New Hampshire, many of whom had fought under the colonial flag, founded the settlement in 1763. It was divided into sixty-four lots, one each for the church, the minister, the school and Harvard College. Sixty lots were to be divided among the families. From the schoolhouse in the wilderness grew the academy where Daniel Webster taught over a century ago, while the new academy is flourishing to-day.

Eminent men helped to build up the town while others have gone forth from it. In every war from the Revolution to the last Spanish war the sons of Fryeburg have been enrolled. In the paths of peace, of education, of industry, in the service of church or state, in every walk of life, are found honored names of those who proudly claim the old town as their birthplace. Here the Chautauqua met for many years.

Mountain views from the nearby hill-tops present most charming pictures, while on the winding river one can sail for twenty miles to leap ashore at Lovewell's Pond, less than two miles distant from the starting point. With pure air, pure water, and beautiful scenery, the quiet restfulness is what every visitor enjoys. There are splendid carriage drives in every direction.

Mother's love their dread for "that terrible second summer" when they have Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in the house. Nature's specific for bowel complaints of every sort.

The Singers are Here.
If one were compelled to decide which one of the wild song birds that come to Maine every year was the very best singer, the task would be a hard one. Like men who are counting a dozen or more girls at the same time, every girl who sings is the best one in the lot while he is in her company. In the early spring when the snow is still upon the ground and the cold winds are blowing, we see the bluebird and hear its clear and therody warbling, opportunities, and then to ourselves, this is surely the sweetest bird on earth. Later, when the song sparrow comes, we hear its glad call and wonder if anything can be more charming.
Then, when the bob-o-link reaches the fields and sends his mad and drunken hisses to the woods, the landscape and make us to feel glad, we cry out for the joy there is in us, and declare that we know for certain that there never was and never will be another bird so wholly happy as and irresponsible as this insane reveler from the south. And so it goes from thrushes to robins, from wrens to swallows and ad infinitum.

Last Saturday afternoon we were sitting out of doors and endeavoring to remove the rheumatism from our joints by taking a sunbath, and thinking we could go to the woods and hunt for wild flowers, when one of the gladdest notes of the whole year came floating down from a pine thicket beyond the house. It was the universal favorite of all people and all classes of people, the bird with many names and the bird with most sweetly-beechee song in all the book of songs which birds make.

Some call it that Peabody bird. Others of a more poetic turn name it the nightingale of the north. In the works on ornithology it is termed the white-throated sparrow, which is certainly descriptive, if not poetical. Nobody who has lived in New England can fail to have noted the song of this prima dona of the fields, the diva of the woods. It is called the Peabody bird from a fancied resemblance of its song to the drawn out uttering of "A-a-e-e-e" Peabody, Peabody, Peabody" repeated over and over with gusto. This is the name known in most places, though the farmers here in Maine declare the words are "Show your seed and bury it, bury it, bury it," because the bird appears after danger of frost has passed, and when it is safe to plant corn and beans and other tender vegetables. Still another attempt to interpret the song of this prima donna in Maine declare the words are "All day-y lo-long, fiddling, fiddling, fiddling."

One can place any meaning he will to the utterances and still find that the beauty and mystery and glory which come to us with the white-throated sparrow is still unsolved. No man can speak or write or criticism on or a description of this unparalleled melody, for the reason that it is beyond measurement in words and something which is wholly divine. The whole orchestra has arrived, these June days.

Drive along any country road about sunset some fine evening and listen to the glorious melody which pours forth from every thicket, bird answering bird, the notes rising and falling like echoing beck calls and the whole upper side of the earth soaked through—actually saturated—with songs such as no human can produce. If the angels can sing as well as the white-throated sparrows do here in Maine one can afford to make any sacrifice for the sake of being in the company of angels during concert time.
